THIS Father's Day holds special significance for 10 year old Jett, who will launch his book 'Does Your Heart Hurt' at the Murray Bridge Library.

Jett McNerney is no stranger to domestic violence and has written a book about his experience to help others.

A post on Jett's Facebook page explains the significance of launching the book on Father's Day.

"There are many dads in SA & Australia who abuse their children," he said.

"It must stop.

"If you are one of those dads then maybe you need to come to my book launch and read my book."

The Does Your Heart Hurt book launch will be held 2pm Sunday 1 September at Murray Bridge Library.

Jett will conduct a reading and signing on the day, and copies of his book will be available to buy.

The budding young author is already putting some thought into his next book.

"My next book will be about having a healthy friendship / relationship with those that hurt your heart," he said.

"Forgiveness is what will make me a great man and an amazing loving daddy one day."
