The Rural City of Murray Bridge has launched a new Public Art Trail map, making it easier than ever for residents and visitors to discover the city's diverse collection of murals, sculptures and public artworks.

The trail features three distinct walking routes, allowing participants to explore different parts of the city at their own pace:

- City Central Walk
- River Walk
- City Fringes Walk

Together, the routes connect more than 40 artworks, including murals, sculptures and installations by local, national and internationally recognised artists.

From vibrant street art and contemporary sculptures to works celebrating Ngarrindjeri culture, local history and the natural environment, each artwork contributes to the story of Murray Bridge and its evolving identity.

The trail encourages people to slow down, explore on foot or by bike, and engage with public art in everyday spaces. Along the way, visitors can enjoy riverside landscapes, community spaces and key landmarks while learning more about the artists and stories behind each work.

Mayor Wayne Thorley said “The trails give active art lovers the opportunity to explore our rich public art offering on foot. We hope that locals and visitors alike take the opportunity to explore parts of our town that they might not be familiar with, and learn a bit more about the stories behind the pieces.”

Printed Public Art Trail maps are now available from:

- Murray Bridge Visitor Information Centre
- Murray Bridge Library
- Round House
- Captain's Cottage
- Murray Bridge Regional Art Gallery

The trail map is also available online via the Rural City of Murray Bridge website. The map will be intermittently updated and will expand over time to include more detail and any new public art works.

Community members and visitors are encouraged to pick up a map, choose a route and discover how art is woven into the everyday fabric of Murray Bridge.
