YOUNG local musicians will showcase their talents at the seventh annual Acoustic Sessions gig at The Station this weekend.

The free family friendly event will provide a platform for aspiring local musicians to perform in front of a supportive local audience to boost their confidence and grow their exposure.

The line-up includes musicians from 12 to 25 years of age from Murray Bridge to Adelaide including Saxon Buchmann, Hannah Smith, Zoe Schwerdt, Josh Champion, Zoe Smith, Will Couzens, Poets of Slam Society and Chasing Lights.

Students from Music SA's Band Connections program run at The Station will open the show, followed by members of Band Connections 2.0.

Youth Officer Paul Ankerson said audiences would enjoy the laid-back atmosphere created for Acoustic Sessions, which provided a change of pace from the usual loud band performances featured in many events at The Station.

"This is the perfect event for locals of all ages who prefer to see local talent in a relaxed and acoustic environment," he said.

"The Station is a fantastic live music venue popular with local youth.

"We have a large stage, top quality sound system, professional lighting show and great local talent.

'Come along and check it out – you won't be disappointed.'

Entry for the alcohol free event is free - food and drinks will be available for purchase.

Acoustic Sessions will be held from 6pm to 9pm Friday 18 October at The Station, 3-5 Railway Terrace, Murray Bridge.
