RSL Lane is the proposed new name being considered for the service road at the entrance to Murray Bridge RSL.

The Rural City of Murray Bridge has put the suggestion out for public consultation, after being approached by a local resident, who asked the section of Old Prince's Highway Service Road be changed to RSL Lane.

Chief Executive Officer Michael Sedgman said a reasonable case had been made, but the community needed to be consulted before any action was taken.

"A resident made the point that the current road name can be confusing for some people, as there is also a section of Old Prince's Highway at the top end of Adelaide Road, on the other side of town," he said.

"Visitors have difficulty finding the RSL if they haven't been there before as some mapping apps and GPS systems currently have the road marked as un-named.

"Changing the name to RSL Lane would eliminate some of the confusion and at the same time have the added benefit of honouring one of our local institutions, the Murray Bridge RSL.

"Of course it's up to the community to let us know what they would like, so I would encourage everyone to visit Council's consultation portal – Let's Talk, and put it in writing."
