Sixth Street is set to come alive again with the next Sixth Street Handmade artist market on Saturday, 4th November 2017. The quirky barbecues are back and over 40 artists will be setting up stalls, providing market-goers the opportunity to purchase quality, handmade products direct from the maker.

Gallery Director Melinda Rankin says “This will be our biggest market yet, with new artists and more food stalls than ever. We have also been keen to provide opportunities for people to get creative themselves, so we hope that people will not only enjoy seeing the efforts of creative people, they will have a go themselves.”

Live music will be in full swing throughout the day, including Mick Kidd and David Blight, and the Kondoli whale tent will be back, with Ngarrindjeri storytelling by a local Elder.
